Correspondence.

BROOKLYN, MAY 16, 1888.

At a fashionable wedding in New York recently, the bridesmaids carried tiny satin bags, made of the material of the bride's dress, embroidered with silver and just large enough to hold a lace handkerchief. One ultra stylish Brooklyn belle has twelve of these little bags, all beautifully embroidered in different designs and colors for her opera glass. Each bag perfectly matches an evening dress. Parlor bags were called in with winter hats. Fashion has banished them to the second floor. They no longer depend from chair-backs and picture-frames. One flat bag, handsomely worked and trimmed with lace, silver or gold braid, is allowed to represent the piano or some convenient stand. This is to hold the cheese-cloth piano and bric-a-brac duster. These useful articles are hemstitched and are about a half a yard long. In selecting cheese-cloth for dusters, fashion certainly had an eye to utility. There is nothing so satisfactory. It also puts the quickest and easiest polish upon windows. A sponge wet with ammonia rubbed quickly over the glass and then polished with cheese-cloth, is a labor-saving process.

It is not absolutely necessary now that all children of all ages shall have their legs encased in black stockings. In Paris, little folks once more wear stockings to match their frocks, though black is still the favorite shade for play dresses or park costumes, and this is sensible.

A lady who had been reading Dr. Weir Mitchell's book, "Doctor and Patient," writes to know what I think of the physician who called upon a patient who was considered very ill and who was suffering fearfully, and gave her nothing but a few sugar pellets dissolved in water. He made a long call, laughed and joked, and told my friend that she would not need to take the medicine often than once in four hours. "What I want to know," my correspondent asks, "if that man was not relying wholly upon a mental of feet—mind cure—for recovery?"

It would be difficult to find a physician of breadth and culture who does not believe in the foundation principles of "mind cure," and equally difficult to find one who has not at some time experimented in sugar pellets or powders. The most successful practitioners are those who use the least medicine, and who by the magnetism of their presence and the wisdom of their words inspire confidence and strengthen the will of the patient to throw off disease. Nervous troubles over which medicine has no control, often yield readily to mental treatment, and the doctor is a fool who hesitates to employ the best means at his disposal. My questioner is evidently laboring under the impression that a physician has no right to use anything but medicine in his treatment. Like many another she has yet to learn that safety lies only in the broadest eclecticism, and this is as true of theology and politics as of medicine. Mind cure has its charms for me but I can't make all the connections necessary to a full endorsement.

A young woman in thanking me for calling her attention and that of her sisters to the Good Sense Corset of Ferris Bros. of New York, asks if I do not think that physicians are very culpable in allowing their patients to crowd their vital organs out of place by tight lacing. "Doctors understand the exact mischief that corset strings play," she writes, "and I think it is a shame that they do not speak freely on the subject." Some physicians do tell these truths to their patients, but it is usually at great risk. "There is no surer way of losing business than this," an upright and skillful practitioner once told me, and added that necessity had at last closed his mouth except in extreme cases, when a patient's life was in danger.

"Then such crises do occur?" I said. "Yes, occasionally," was the sad response, "when a woman has succeeded in forcing a thirty inch waist into a twenty-two inch corset. After a while it is death or relief, and then if I arrive in time I cut the strings and tell the truth."

We are having a little respite now. Because such fashionable dress makers as Worth of Paris, consider it no longer stylish to have a pipe-stem waist, there is no excuse for even the most radically fashionable to wear the stiff, tight garments that are so detrimental to health. Worth has done some good anyway, and the reform that Ferris Bros. have accomplished can never be estimated.

Rev. Mr. Montgomery, pastor of the Green Avenue Baptist Church of this city, has openly stated that the death of Miss Emma Byrd, a Brooklyn school teacher, was caused by overwork imposed upon her by the Board of Education. The Brooklyn Eagle remarks that "if there is the slightest likelihood that this charge is well founded, the Board cannot too promptly relieve itself of such an unpleasant responsibility."

It is quite time that these things were looked into. The larger part of our public school teachers are obliged to work all day, every evening, and every Saturday. Why does not the Eagle invite some of these teachers to state the number of hours they are compelled to labor and the duties that are required of them? If a number I could mention would come to the front in this fashion it would make rich reading, but very few will dare state facts for fear of losing their positions. Teachers who are indebted to the Boss for "influence" will not, and those who come in on their merits, know that it is only by the greatest care and fidelity that they can retain their places. The bravest woman in the two cities is Miss C. B. Le Row, instructor of elocution in the Brooklyn Grammar Schools. "English as She is Taught" shows up the stupidity and iniquity of "the system" as no other book ever has. Her next volume "How to Shoot" is now in press, and will go still deeper into this subject, and while quite as uniquely funny as the other will contain the author's views on the subject of education as well as the opinion of other students and thinkers. "That book is incendiary," a gentleman remarked of "English as She is Taught," soon after it came out, "and it will cost you your position."

"Thank heaven, I have two professions," Miss Le Row replied. "But I am not in the least apprehensive. Truth is mighty, and as long as I have a voice and a pen I am going to keep telling it." And she has been as good as her word.

Kings County Republicans have all gone stark, staring mad over Blaine. Dead or alive, sick or well, willing or unwilling, he must consent to a nomination. This, however regarded, is a mighty compliment for the "Plumed Knight," and what he will do in the hour, the second favorite is certainly Chauncey M. Depew, a more brilliant man than James G. Blaine, a man of honor and as genial as a June day. If the Republican women had a political voice, it would undoubtedly be raised for Mr. Depew. I'm not sure that I shouldn't do a little shouting myself if this were the case, notwithstanding the fact that I am at present what may be characterized as a "Fence Mugwump."

How Baking Powders Are Made.

While rival companies are disputing as to what ingredients are to be found in the "best baking powder," the public will be interested in the following definition of these now indispensable articles as given by Appleton's Cyclopaedia, the acknowledged American authority.

"The best baking powders are composed of bicarbonate of potash (cream of tartar), tartaric acid, carbonate of ammonia, and soda bi-carbonate, bound together by a little starch."

Chase Brothers Company, (this paper.)

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

IN CHANCERY OF NEW JERSEY.

To Victor a Sybill. By virtue of an order of the Court of Chancery of New Jersey, made on the day of the date hereof in a cause where Joseph D. Gallagher is complainant, and you are defendant, you are required to appear and defend, or answer to the complaint filed by the said Joseph D. Gallagher, on or before the eighteenth day of May next, or the said bill will be taken as confessed against you.

The said bill is filed to set aside a certain deed made by you to Benjamin F. Crane as fraudulent and void for the purpose of hindering, delaying and defrauding the complainant in the collection of his debt. The said deed is dated the seventh day of August 1887 and is recorded in Book 23 of Deeds for Essex County on page 84, A.C., and also to set aside as fraudulent and void a bill of sale by the said Benjamin F. Crane to William L. Morton, dated the fifth day of October, 1887, and recorded in Book F. 23 of Deeds for Essex County, on page 44, A.C., and the order given by the said Benjamin F. Crane to one Louis Headley, and dated the first day of June, 1887, and recorded in Book Q 23 of Deeds for Essex County, on page 178, A.C.

And you are made defendant because it is alleged that you are really the owner of said lands in said deeds described, and because it is sought to have them sold to pay and satisfy the claim of the complainant against you.

Dated March 17th, 1888.

SHERIFF'S SALE.—In Chancery of New Jersey Between Thomas J. Ward, complainant, and Horace Person, et al., defendants.—D. C., for sale of mortgaged premises.

By virtue of the above stated writ of fieri facias, to me directed I shall expose for sale at public vendue, at the Court House in Newark, on Tuesday, the 10th day of June next, at two o'clock, P. M., all that tract or parcel of land and premises situate, lying and being in the township of Bloomfield, Essex County, New Jersey.

Beginning at the point of intersection of the southerly line of Mayville avenue with the center line of Ridgewood avenue; thence (1) along said southerly line of said Mayville avenue south fifty-two degrees and nineteen minutes east four hundred and sixty-three feet and forty-six one hundredths of a foot to the centre line of Ward avenue (which Ward avenue as well as all other avenues mentioned herein are sixty feet wide); thence (2) along said centre line of said Ward avenue south forty-two degrees and forty-two minutes west, being parallel with said Ridgewood avenue and four hundred feet distant at right angles therefrom, a distance of eleven hundred and fifty-five feet and six tenths of a foot, more or less, to the northerly line of land belonging to the estate of John Dodd, deceased; thence (3) along said land of said estate and land lately owned by Henry Sucky north forty-five degrees and one-tenth of a foot to the centre line of Ridgewood avenue; thence (4) along said last mentioned centre line north forty-four degrees and forty-two minutes east ten hundred and ninety-seven feet and nine-tenths of a foot to the place of
